

Girl-Centered Programming: What Are We Really Doing?

February 27-28, 2013

Join USAID's Interagency Youth Working Group, the Coalition for Adolescent Girls and the Youth Health and Rights Coalition for a provoking online discussion about the critical importance of a girl-centered approach to health and development.

This forum is being hosted by FHI 360, on behalf of USAID's Interagency Youth Working Group; the Coalition for Adolescent Girls; and the Youth Health and Rights Coalition. The on-line forum will be moderated by Amelia Peltz, USAID; Wendy Baldwin, Population Reference Bureau; Kelly Hallman, Population Council; Joyce Adolwa, CARE; Paulina Ndawala, Advancing Girls' Education in Africa; Allie McGonagle Glinski, ICRW; and Suzanne Petroni, ICRW. We will discuss:

- Why a "girl-centered" approach to health and development is critical
- How to adopt a multisectoral approach to adolescent girls' health and development that includes sexual and reproductive health as well as other components
- The challenges and opportunities associated with multisectoral programs for girls
- The resources available for multisectoral programming for girls
- How to ensure meaningful participation by girls within a multisectoral programmatic approach

The forum will be open for comments and questions at 9:00 a.m. EST on February 27th through 5:00 p.m. EST on February 28th.

Join the conversation here.

Interagency
Youth
Working
Group

YOUTH HEALTH AND
RIGHTS COALITION

